Abstract:	The History and Special Collections Division collects primary and secondary materials in two broad subject areas: the history of medicine and its allied fields, and the history of biology. The Division collects and preserves rare books, journals, manuscript and archival materials, pamphlets, original art, prints, and photographs. Medical instruments and artifacts are acquired selectively. Acquired on a selective basis are microfilms and audiovisual materials. Primary materials in medicine are collected regardless of format from the earliest times to approximately 1920. In biology the collecting period is mid-15th century onward. Although most formats are present in the collections, the emphasis is on printed works. The secondary collection contains approximately 30,000 volumes. The Division receives approximately 100 journal titles and possesses a large reference collection. SERVICES: reference, reproduction (photocopy, photography, microfilm, digitizing), tours. Outreach: exhibits (in-house, travelling, and online); lecture series: UCLA Programs in Medical Classics (see http://unitproj1.library.ucla.edu/biomed/histmed/events-2.cfm).
